Japan Raided Again

A FORCE of about 125 Super-Fortresses continued the daily bombing of Japan yesterday with a high explosive attack on Toyokawa, a naval arsenal, 40 miles south-east of Nagoya.

The Fortresses were escorted by fighters from Iwo-jima, says Reuter.

An American prize crew brought a stinking, crowded Japanese hospital ship into a Pacific port, with red crosses towering above it and its holds bulging with weapons of war and ammunition under Red Cross labels, according to a delayed message cabled last Monday by an A.P. war correspondent.

The ship was brought in as evidence against the Japanese three days after a small, unarmed inspection party boarded it in the Banda Sea, and found war contraband, in violation of International Law. General MacArthur announced that the ship had been seized on August 4th.

It is expected that the arrival of President Truman in Washington to-day will be greeted by criticism of the decisions reached at Potsdam and a series of domestic crises, writes a Reuter correspondent.

These issues, however, are likely to be overshadowed by developments which are believed to be imminent in the Far East.

On the voyage home the President prepared a report on the Potsdam meeting, to be broadcast to the nation, but it is stated in Washington that developments in the Pacific may make it out of date.

Chinese troops yesterday cleared the coastal town of Yeungkong, 150 miles west of Hongkong, thus isolating the Japanese force on the Liuichow Peninsula from their main garrison centre at Canton, the Chinese High Command announced yesterday. The Japanese are withdrawing along the highway north of Yeungkong with the Chinese in pursuit.

Youth Welfare Training in Northern Ireland

An impressive account of the developments of facilities for youth welfare training and recreation is contained in the first annual report of the Youth Committee for Northern Ireland.

There are 37,142 boys and 28,585 girls—a total of 65,728—enrolled in youth organisations. Of these, 28,126 (18,496 boys and 9,630 girls) are in Belfast, and 37,601 (18,646 boys and 18,955 girls) in the remainder of the Province.

The organisations to which they belong are the Girl Guides, Girls' Life Brigade, Girls' Brigade, Boys' Brigade, Boy Scouts, Church Lads' Brigade, Sea Cadets, Army Cadet Force, Air Training Corps, Training Corps for Girls, Salvation Army Youth Section, Voluntary Youth Clubs, Girls' Auxiliary and Boys' Auxiliary.

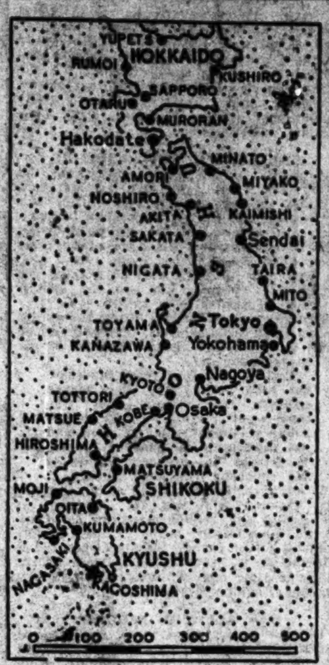
The harmful effects of a State youth system are too well recognised to require mention, said the report. The Committee is satisfied that there is room for the independent youth club, for the larger federating of the initiating organisations and for services instituted by the education authority, all working in harmony for the benefit of youth.

Grants by the Ministry of Education to youth organisations have been greatly increased. In 1929 they totalled £833. Last year they totalled £17,136.

Liner on Fire In Belfast

An outbreak of fire occurred yesterday in the 23,000-ton Royal Mail Line steamship Asturias, at present undergoing repairs in Harland and Wolff's shipyard, Belfast. The fire originated in the stokehold and would have been confined to this part of the ship had it not been for the fact that fuel oil had percolated through the vessel after she had been torpedoed in the Mediterranean.

When the fire brigade arrived, firemen found that not only was the stokehold alight, but the main and auxiliary engine rooms were also burning. After an hour and a quarter the fire was brought under control and was completely extinguished in two hours.



Adjectives From Japan

THE atomic bomb has profoundly shaken both the military city of Hiroshima and Japanese morale, and Japanese fears of the new weapon are indicated (says an A.P. correspondent) in the unprecedented series of adjectives describing it.

They call the attack "inhuman," "wanton," "destructive," "barbaric," "bestial," and "designed to massacre innocent civilians."

American "impatience at the slow progress of the much vaunted invasion of the Japanese mainland" is described as one of the main reasons for the use of the bomb.

WITNESS TELLS STORY OF TERRIBLE RAID

DETAILS of the bombing of Hiroshima were disclosed at a Press conference yesterday, attended by General Spaatz, who termed the new bomb "the most revolutionary development in the history of the world."

The effect of a single atomic bomb, he said, was equivalent to a raid by 2,000 Super-Fortresses.

General Spaatz smiled when asked if the bomb would be dropped again in the near future. He would not comment on what would happen if 600 Super-Fortresses—a normal sized raid—all carried the new bomb against Japan.

The crew who carried the appalling new bomb, although they were far away, felt the concussion like a close explosion of anti-aircraft artillery, says an A.P. Correspondent. Colonel Paul W. Tibbits, junior, who piloted the Super-Fortress, and Captain William S. Parsons, a U.S. Navy Ordnance expert, described the explosion as tremendous and awe-inspiring.

Neither could give an estimate of the damage, but they declared "it must have been extensive."

There is reason to believe, however, that the city of 343,000 persons no longer exists.

Tibbits had been trained specially for the mission, which General Spaatz considered so important that he awarded Tibbits the Distinguished Service Cross as he stepped from the plane after the flight.

VISUAL IMPACT

An eye-witness declared that the atomic bomb struck squarely in the centre of Hiroshima with a flash and concussion that brought the exclamation "Oh, my God!" from a battle-hardened member of the Super-Fortress crew 10 miles away.

"There was a visual impact, even though every man wore coloured glasses for protection. A mountain of smoke was going up, with steam coming down. At the top was white smoke, but up to 1,000 feet there was swirling and boiling dust.

"Soon afterwards small fires sprang up on the edge of the town, but the town itself was entirely obscured. We stayed around for two or three minutes, and by that time the smoke had risen to 40,000 feet."

Commenting on the fact that the Japanese reported that the atomic bomb was parachuted on to Hiroshima, General MacArthur said: "It would be logical to use such means to deliver it, since, with its tremendous blast area, great accuracy is not needed, and slow descent would give the bomber time to get away to safety."

Asked why the U.S. Air Force did not choose Tokyo, he stated: "Possibly, if we had hit the Japanese capital we would not have left any organisation in being capable of surrendering."

A military spokesman in Washington said he did not think Russia shared the secret of the bomb.

No Immediate Revolution In Car Design

MOTOR CAR manufacturers do not think that the discovery of the atomic bomb will cause any immediate revolution in motor car design, according to a member of the Research Department of the Austin Motor Co., Ltd., Birmingham, who said yesterday: "The opinion of our technical experts is that the atomic bomb has no immediate significance for the motor industry; it may become significant as soon as the problem of harnessing atomic power has been solved.

"The whole question of atomic power is still in the realms of pure science rather than applied science and the technical side."

Sir Miles Thomas, Vice-Chairman of the Nuffield Organisation, said: "It would be a very long-term development were this new source of energy to be used in the motor industry, if, indeed, it were used at all. It must first be harnessed, carefully and completely, before it can possibly be used in so small a compass as a motor car engine."

Arrest of German Industrial Chief

Doctor Karl Krauch, Chairman of the Board of Directors of I. G. Farben Industries, who has evaded American Intelligence officers for the past three months, has been arrested, it was learned last night, an Associated Press message from Hoescht, Germany, says.

He was tracked down in Heidelberg, Colonel Edwin S. Pillsbury, who is directing the seizure of German industries in the American zone, stated. He described Krauch as the chief intermediary between the Farben combine and the Nazi Party.

De Gaulle Will Hold Referendum

General de Gaulle will hold a referendum on the constitutional question, despite the strong opposition shown by the Consultative Assembly on July 29th, when the Government project on this subject was heavily defeated.

The Cabinet yesterday agreed upon another project, which, though amended in some respects, retains two of the essential features criticised by the majority of the Assembly—the referendum and de Gaulle's refusal to envisage the election of an all-powerful Constituent Assembly, says Reuter's special correspondent in Paris.

No communiqué was issued after yesterday's meeting, because the discussions will continue to-day, but it is learned on good authority that the following essential features of the Government's project were adopted yesterday:—

Elections will be held next October for either a Chamber and Senate under the old Constitution or for a new Constituent Assembly, according to the result of the referendum to be held at the same time as, or shortly before, the elections.

Where the Government has made concessions to the Assembly's criticism is in submitting itself to greater control by the new Assembly than de Gaulle originally desired. In the original proposals the Government or its Ministers could not be turned out of office during the maximum period of seven months provided for the life of the new Constituent Assembly, during which time its main task would be to draw up a new Constitution for France.

TO-DAY'S MEETING

In the new project the Government can be voted out of office if the Assembly, after giving 48 hours' notice of its intention, refuses to pass a vote of confidence.

To-day the Cabinet will decide whether voting is to be on the basis of Proportional Representation or a majority vote. The Consultative Assembly showed a big majority in favour of Proportional Representation, but it is understood that the Cabinet is divided on the subject.

Deportation of German Internees

Preparations for the departure of the 260 German sailors and airmen from the Curragh internment camp are well under way.

An internee stated yesterday that Lt.-Commander Quedenfeld, senior officer of the camp, had gone to Dublin to make what might be the final arrangements for repatriation.

Several internees were unable to give any definite date for their departure, but stated they were of the opinion that they would have to dispose of 154 bicycles, which were bought from wages earned on neighbouring bogs and farms, and the manufacture of toys and models.

Cork-Fishguard Boat Service

A letter from Mr. Sinnott, general manager, B. and I. Co., informed the Cork Harbour Board yesterday that the Great Western Railway Co. had arranged suitable services to and from Fishguard in connection with the resumption of the Cork-Fishguard tri-weekly service beginning on August 13th.

Rumours that the Rosslare-Fishguard mail and passenger service is to be resumed are current in Rosslare, more especially since the arrival of a cargo of locomotive coal.

Strategic Decisions Outdated By Atomic Discovery

THE ATOM BOMB YESTERDAY WAS THE WORLD'S NO. 1 CONVERSATION TOPIC. SCIENTISTS DISCUSSED THE TREMENDOUS NEW RESOURCES OF POWER PLACED IN THE HANDS OF MANKIND, FORECASTING THAT, IN FUTURE WARS, WHOLE CITIES COULD BE WIPED OUT AT A SINGLE BLOW.

ON THE CONSTRUCTIVE SIDE, THEY PAINTED A PICTURE OF A POWERFUL SUBSTITUTE FOR EXISTING FUELS AND ELECTRIC POWER, OF VOYAGES TO THE MOON, AND OF GREAT OCEAN LINERS DRIVEN BY A SMALL MOTOR.

The "New York Times" stated:—"Civilisation can now survive only if there is a revolution in mankind's political thinking."

Reuter's Military Correspondent believes that the discovery makes strategic decisions taken at Potsdam out of date, and that security will no longer be definable by control of the Dardanelles or the Suez Canal, or this and that river or mountain range.

Professor H. A. Wilson, one of the U.S. scientists who helped to create the bomb, stated that all the world's uranium should be seized and controlled by an international body, such as the United Nations.

Dr. Roy Marshall, director of the Fels Planetarium, said that the internal combustion engines will be a thing of the past within ten years, and Dr. Volrath, physicist, of South California University, commented: "The power of uranium puts man's attempt to reach the moon within the bounds of possibility."

Sir John Anderson, who, as Lord President of the Council and Chancellor of the Exchequer, was appointed by Mr. Churchill to be responsible for atomic research, told a P.A. reporter: "We have got to see to it that the colossal energy created by the atomic bomb is harnessed for the benefit of mankind and not for destruction. I say that in face of what is expected from the results of the atomic bombing of Japan.

"So far, no work worth mentioning in connection with the great invention has been done on anything but destruction. War purposes have been given absolute priority, but the basic investigations, the fundamentals of the whole thing, will stand when investigation is made into using the energy of the bomb for industrial development.

"My opinion is that it will take a long time. So far no really efficient method has been devised of applying it on an economically competitive basis with coal and oil. At the moment it is doubtful if a method can be found.

"You only need to look at the gigantic cost of harnessing the destructive force (£500,000,000) to realise what work and cost will be entailed in finding the industrial value."

In a broadcast Sir John said: "The possibilities for good or ill are infinite.

"There may, on the one hand, be a veritable treasure-house awaiting fruitful development in the interests of mankind; there may, on the other hand, be the realisation of a maniac dream of death, destruction and dissolution.

"This is the biggest thing in scientific development. The possibilities of it are greater than electricity because it is an entirely new thing."

Professor Gilbert Murray, Joint President of the League of Nations Union, said to a P.A. reporter: "How far is it possible or wise to diffuse generally over the world the knowledge of how to make these bombs? There are very great dangers now. There are enormous difficulties in keeping it as a secret of one or two nations. I feel it has produced a very interesting problem and a very alarming one."

HITLER'S MISTAKE ?

Professor Kendall, of the Chair of Chemistry at Edinburgh University, stated that scientists had been holding their breath and waiting for the atomic bomb for the past five years.

"If Hitler had had any sense," said Professor Kendall, "he would have delayed making war until he had got the Germans on to this. If he had done so the war would have ended in six days instead of going on for nearly six years."

Prince Louis Maurice de Broglie, one of France's leading scientists, said of the new atom bomb: "I think it is still premature to talk of blowing up the whole terrestrial globe, but I think it is perfectly possible to wipe out an entire town in one blow."

Stock Prices Drop In New York

STOCK MARKET prices dropped as much as three points yesterday, as Wall Street interpreted the development of the atomic bomb as meaning an end of the war against Japan sooner than was expected. Railways, Aircrafts, Steels and Utilities showed the widest breaks. There were lesser declines in Metals, Rubbers, Oils and Motors.—(A.P.)

Jewess From Berlin Was Link in Discovery

A 67-YEAR-OLD Austrian Jewess, Dr. Lise Meitner, once a director of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Berlin, was an important link in the chain of events leading to the development of the atomic bomb, according to an A.P. correspondent in Stockholm.

A brother-in-law, Dr. Justinian Frisch, yesterday told the story of her contribution to the amazing discovery which probably destroyed the Japanese Army base of Hiroshima. As an accomplished mathematician, Dr. Meitner, who left Germany with the rise of Hitler, was greatly interested in the discoveries of the German scientists, Hahn and Strassman, who, in 1938, showed theoretically that the uranium atom could be transformed into darium atom.

She communicated the information, together with observations of her own, to her Austrian nephew, Dr. Otto Frisch, who had joined Dr. Niels Bohr's institute in Copenhagen in 1934 as an assistant. In the absence of Dr. Bohr, who was in America, young Frisch began experiments to prove that the uranium atom could be split, and he succeeded in February, 1939.

Published reports said that this experiment—using 600 milligrams of radium—released energy equal to 200,000,000 volts of electricity.

In July, 1939, Frisch left Denmark for England, where he worked at Birmingham, and at the University of Liverpool, as an assistant to Sir James Chadwick. He became a British citizen in 1943, and later that year went to the U.S., where for a time he worked at an experimental atomic laboratory in Santa Fe.

Lord Halifax's Agreement With Vichy

VICHY'S Minister of Education and Health in 1940-'42, Professor Jacques Chevalier, told the Pétain Trial Court yesterday that through Lord Halifax Britain made an agreement with the Vichy Government which came into force in December, 1940.

Professor Chevalier quoted a letter, alleged to have been sent by Lord Halifax, in which the then British Foreign Minister stated, according to Reuter: "We ask the French (first) to keep the Fleet, (second) to keep the Colonies, (third) to do nothing to get back those other Colonies which have joined us."

In return, Lord Halifax promised to ease the blockade. Pétain approved the agreement, and two days later, said Professor Chevalier, Vichy had word from Britain that the British had accepted, and the agreement was put into force. It resulted in the easing of the petrol and oil blockade, and the opening of a passage for French ships through the Straits of Gibraltar.

This agreement, the Professor explained, was handed to him by M. Pierre Dupuy, Canadian Minister to Vichy. It was in the form of a personal letter from Lord Halifax, Chevalier's fellow-student at Oxford.

"Dupuy and Lord Halifax wanted to resume contact with Vichy through me," he said. "Lord Halifax, in his letter to me, said: 'Tell our French friends we are in a delicate situation. We cannot fall on each other's neck. Artificial tension must be maintained between us to safeguard Article Nine of the Armistice Convention, but behind that façade of misunderstanding we must get together.'"

Later Admiral Darlan, Commander of Vichy's armed forces, brought back an agreement from Germany providing for the cession of French Colonial bases to Germany. This was avoided by greatly increasing French counter-demands, so that the Germans would not accept.

Chevalier said that Pétain told him in February, 1941: "I am caught between policies—collaboration with the British, which I would prefer, and collaboration with the Germans, whom I detest. I resist the Germans as much as possible."

Chevalier recalled that Mr. Winston Churchill described Pétain's attitude as one of "passive resistance" to the Germans, and that the Germans called him "Marshal Nein," because he refused their demands.

Early in 1941, Chevalier added, he received from the British Government documents in duplicate, addressed to Pétain, encouraging the Vichy Premier to take the line of resistance to German demands.

When the Judge interrupted to say, "You know Mr. Churchill has denied the existence of this agreement?" Chevalier replied, "No, not this agreement. I fear no denial on that, I can assure you."

PETAIN'S WIFE

While Marshal Pétain sat in court yesterday his wife, Madame Pétain, who is also charged with intelligence with the enemy, was being questioned in the Palace of Justice by Maitre Berry, the magistrate investigating her case.

Maitre Berry tried, during the long interrogation, to establish whether Madame Pétain had any influence over the Marshal.

Mr. Anthony Eden's Son Presumed Dead

It was stated authoritatively in London last night that it is no longer possible to entertain any hope for the survival of Sergeant Simon Eden, R.A.F., elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Eden, who was previously posted as missing.

The P.A. Diplomatic correspondent adds that Sergeant Eden was a member of the crew of an aeroplane engaged on a supply mission to a forward area in Burma, which, on its way back, ran into monsoon weather and crashed into the side of a mountain.

A long search was made, and eventually the wrecked plane was discovered and identified by the pilot's pay book. None of the crew survived.

Thirty-five people are believed to have been killed in Port Arthur, Ontario, yesterday, in an explosion at a wheat storage elevator on the waterfront. Some 30 workmen were rescued as the flames swept the wreckage of the elevator, which had a storage capacity of 2,000,000 bushels.

EMPLOYMENT PROBLEM FOR NORTHERN IRELAND

IN the Northern Ireland House of Commons yesterday, the debate was resumed on the motion in the names of Mr. R. Getgood and Mr. H. Downey, calling on the Government to take steps to ensure that suitable employment or maintenance was provided for all distressed workers, and on an amendment, moved by Mr. T. Baillie (U., North Down) and Major J. Perceval-Maxwell (U., Ards), asking that all efforts should be made to secure that, in the absence of employment, adequate unemployment insurance benefits should be provided.

Mr. Baillie said that all sides of the House should join in a concerted effort to deal with unemployment, which might become even more serious than it was now.

Major Perceval-Maxwell said that relief measures would have to be closely co-ordinated with England, and designed to assist industry.

Mr. J. M. Andrews (U., Mid-Down), referring to the proposals to give maintenance to those for whom there was no work, suggested that, in addition to unemployment benefits to all unemployed, there should given an opportunity of obtaining part of their post-war credits.

Mr. Andrews said: "You can't compel people to come and establish businesses here unless they feel there is security for their capital. Very often speeches made by members of the Opposition and others were deterrent to capitalists to come and spend their money here."

Mr. Getgood stated that nothing had been said which showed that the Government recognised the gravity of the situation.

The Government amendment was carried by 22 votes to 9.

The House gave a second reading to the Government's Loans Bill.

The Minister of Finance, Major J. M. Sinclair, said that the proposals would enable loans to be issued by rates of interest which, for cheapness to the borrowers, were without precedent in the history of that Parliament.

The proposed rates were:—Loans for not more than 5 years, 2 per cent.; from 5 to 10 years, 2¼ per cent.; from 10 to 15 years, 2½ per cent.; from 15 to 30 years, 3 per cent.; and more than 30 years, 3¼ per cent. The authorised limit for outstanding loans would be increased from 10 million pounds to 15 million pounds.

German Prisoners-of-War On Murder Charge

FOUR German prisoners-of-war, charged with the murder of another prisoner, Unteroffizier Gerhardt Rettig, at a Sheffield prisoner-of-war camp, on March 24th, appeared before a Military Court at Kensington Palace Gardens yesterday. Rettig was alleged to have given away a plot by his comrades to escape through a tunnel. The trial was adjourned until to-day.

The accused are: Feldwebel Emil Schmittendorf, San Gefreiter Armin Kuehne, Unteroffizier Heinz Ditzler and Soldat Juergen Kersting. They all pleaded not guilty.

During the trial the names of German witnesses will be kept secret.

Major R. A. L. Hillard, prosecuting officer, said that Rettig and a friend in a barrack hut were non-Nazis. On the afternoon of March 24th Rettig communicated with the British guards through the wire. Later, Rettig left the hut, and almost immediately came running back followed by a crowd of about 20 or 30 prisoners.

Kuehne and Ditzler were among the first of that crowd to rush in after Rettig. They chased Rettig and beat him with their fists. Rettig was pushed out of the hut with his face covered with blood and his eyes nearly closed. The crowd chased him across the open ground, and cornered him outside the wash-house. There were probably at that time 100 men collected around him, some of whom were shouting—"Beat him to death," and others—"Hang him."

Later, when Rettig was lying on the ground crumpled up, Schmittendorf dragged his head clear of his arms and kicked him with his boot on the head. By this time the crowd was considerably larger. Then the cry was raised, "The Tommies are coming," and the crowd melted away, leaving Rettig lying unconscious.

A medical orderly found Rettig lying between the arms of the rubbish bin. He was taken by ambulance to a hospital near Sheffield, but he was dead on admission. The cause of death was severe injuries to the head.

Paper That Lost War for Germany

The accidental discovery of a secret German document enabled the British Army to evacuate more than 300,000 men from Dunkirk, was disclosed yesterday, the Associated Press Staff Correspondent in Frankfurt says.

"This was the paper that lost the war for Germany, because it opened an escape hatch for the core of the British Army, and it gave Britain at least the semblance of a chance to hold on until Russia and the United States were drawn to her aid," an Intelligence Officer of G2 of the United States Forces in the European theatre said.

At an hour when the French were being slaughtered and the British were making a desperate effort to evacuate their helpless divisions, a member of the German General Staff on a reconnaissance mission pushed too far ahead of the German lines, and was fired on by a British patrol. The officer and his men escaped across the fields, but their vehicles were captured by the patrol. In it were details of a surprise attack in the Calais region designed to cut off the British escape.

The plan fell into the hands of the commander of a small British force screening the Dunkirk beaches, only a few hours before the German attack was scheduled to begin. It foretold a hook movement by a German force moving up from Abbeville and striking in the rear of the Dunkirk area. Gambling everything on a bold strategy, the British commander concentrated every man he had at the point of the German attack. The Germans attacked to the minute, but the initial assault was "stopped cold," and the British covering force held on for three days, while the Dunkirk beaches were emptied of 330,000 British and French soldiers.

No Nationalisation Of Northern Industry

The Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, Sir Basil Brooke, replying to Mr. T. J. Campbell (Nationalist, Central) in the Northern Ireland House of Commons yesterday, said that it was not the intention of the Government to adopt a policy of nationalisation of industry and institutions.

They were seated in a taxi in Denny street when the shooting occurred.

A floating mine drifted ashore near the Herring Pond, Portstewart, yesterday morning, and exploded with great force. The windows in many houses were shattered, but nobody was injured.

Conference Of Heads Of Services

ALL the twenty Ministers in Mr. Attlee's newly-appointed Cabinet were in session in the Cabinet Room at 10 Downing street for a long period last night.

Service chiefs—General Ismay; Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, Field-Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, and others—were called in for consultation. That seems to indicate, says the P.A. Lobby Correspondent, that the Japanese war, with probably the terrible consequences and astonishing possibilities of the atomic bomb which has been dropped on Hiroshima, was in the forefront of the discussions.

The first actual Cabinet meeting was held at night. No Ministers were at this except the twenty who, Mr. Attlee has announced, constitute his Cabinet. But it was their second long session at No. 10 yesterday. Earlier in the afternoon there had been "a meeting of Cabinet Ministers," at which many who are not included in the specially chosen twenty were present.

Last night's Cabinet meeting lasted three hours. As a result, some Ministers had to abandon appointments. It is understood that a long agenda was before the Ministers for discussion.

Not More Irish Because They Speak Gaelic

A feature of the third day's proceedings of Muintir na Tire Rural Week at De La Salle College, Waterford, was an all-Irish session, at which a paper entitled "Modh Beatha agus Feallsúnacht Gaedheal," was read by Sean O Suilleabhain, archivist, Irish Folklore Commission. The people living in the Gaeltacht, he said, were misunderstood by those who praised them unthinkingly, as much as by those who condemned them utterly. Even if the language were saved and the culture that it enshrined were lost this country would be a miserable thing, but if the language, too, were lost, the name of Eire would be only a name upon the map.

Declaring that they had much to learn from the culture of the past, Mr. O Suilleabhain said that Ireland was never an island in the spiritual and cultural sense until recently, when the people began to show a complete apathy regarding their own past and there remained only an impulse to emigrate to some large city.

The Rev. Brother Patrick, De La Salle, said that improvement was evident in the revival of the language, but he did not think the people were any more Irish as a result. The true Irish outlook, which should accompany the language, should be safeguarded in the Gaeltacht.

Tomas Breathnach said there was a danger that if the language died out the faith would also die in Ireland.

"The sooner we have our own film industry here the better," said the Rev. Brother Alfred, De La Salle, who expressed the opinion that the philosophy of Hollywood was opposed to the Irish philosophy.

Sean Goulding, Chairman of the Senate, presided.

(By Our Racing Correspondent.)

TO-DAY, at Phœnix Park, there will be representative fields in each of the seven races, and there is every prospect of lively and very interesting racing.

The most valuable race on the card is the selling race for two-year-olds. There are three previous winners in the field and possibly the grey filly, Plover Hill, who has not run since easily beating Sister Vincent early in the season, will prove the best of these.

She may not beat Lady's Pack. This is a well made filly, by Pactolus, and in each of her four races she has shown excellent speed. Zinga, who is a half-brother to the brilliant sprinter, Royal Phœnix, and who ran very well behind Fair Truckle in his second last outing, may cause her most difficulty.

OUT FOR HAT-TRICK.

The other two-year-old race gives the improving Signalman an opportunity to win three times in a row. He has to give 7lb. to the Colombo colt, Punkah, one of three two-year-olds recently sent to Ireland from Victor Smyth's stable at Epsom. Although Punkah's form in England was very promising, his keenness for racing seems questionable, and he will need to run generously to account for Signalman.

In the Maynooth Plate, run over ten furlongs, Whitsuntide will attempt to continue his winning ways, and even with 8-13 on his back his chance is far from negligible. Lady Constance ran like a useful filly behind Poolfix in the Scurries at the last Curragh meeting, while the top-weight, Salaam, who comes up for sale on Friday, is very fit just now.

Seraglio, if she leaves the gate with alacrity, might show everything else a clean pair of heels, and Carlist can be relied upon to run his usual good race. Hesitantly, however, I suggest that the selected of More O'Ferrall's pair—Taffytrap and Golden Horus—will win. Taffytrap, who generally wins a race at this time of year, is not unfairly weighted on his best form, and the three-year-old, Golden Horus, was heavily backed in the "Madrids."

HISWAY'S CHANCE.

I like Hisway best of E. T. O'Sullivan's three runners in the concluding five-furlong race. He has developed into a first-class three-year-old at the sprinting game, and he is sure to be in the fighting line at the finish. He would seem to have a few pounds in hand with the very fast horse, Stop It.

Another three-year-old trained by O'Sullivan is the handsome and well-bred colt, Highland Nectar. He also has given evidence of his speed in sprint races, and in the Apprentices' Race he is bound to take any amount of beating. The big danger is the proven handicapper, Calvados.

Choosing between Bahara, Shady Boy and Precentor in the second race is perplexing. Precentor's running on Monday was overloaded with promise, while in his only start this year Shady Boy gave Ford Transport 8lb. and finished a neck behind him.

None the less, Bahara put up a meritorious performance when close up third to Priorate over this distance in May, and provided he is not feeling the effects of his race last Saturday I think he will win.

Fourth and Sixth Races.

DRAWN NO. 1—WHICH SIDE IS IT?

HOW many people going racing are interested in that all-important factor—the draw? Outside the regulars and the big bettors, one could safely say not many. This is not so much due to lack of interest as on account of the difficulty of knowing from which side of the starting gate the order of places operates.

From to-day visitors to Phœnix Park Races will have no difficulty in reading the places at the starting gate filled by the horses they have backed.

Mr. Harry Peard has erected a large red disc on all his starting posts, and the jockey who has drawn No. 1 position will be placed nearest the starting post indicated by the disc. This is an arrangement which might be copied by all other racecourse executives.

Fishlock in Form

ENGLAND made a spirited reply to Australia's total of 388 in the fourth Victory Test at Lord's. In half the time Australia spent at the crease England got to within 139 runs of their score for the loss of only three men, Hutton, Fishlock and Robertson.

Fishlock, particularly, gave a grand display in making top score 69. Next best for England was "extras" with 51, Australia having to rely on a deputy wicket-keeper in J. A. Workman. In 1934 at the Oval, England was similarly placed when F. E. Woolley kept wicket. That day extras reached 50.

ALMOST SEVEN HOURS.

A full house of 34,000 saw Australia pursue their safety first methods. Miller could not reproduce his Monday strokes, and eventually fell to a grand ball by Pope Sixth to leave at 301, Miller made his 118 in three hours 20 minutes, and hit ten fours.

Altogether the side occupied just under seven hours making their total of 388. Not until the last twenty minutes did any one, apart from Miller, show freedom, and then the last four wickets went down, as it were, in a heap.

Immediately Hutton and Fishlock opened for England the character of the cricket changed, and their 73 was the best first-wicket stand of the series against Australia. Hutton seemed thoroughly set when Williams, for the third time in these matches, brought about his downfall.

MAN IN THE GAP.

The success of Fishlock, the Surrey left-hander, only emphasised how handicapped England had been without him in the previous matches. Very strong on the leg side, he also drove and cut well until his leg stump went down to a vicious spinner. There were twelve fours in his 69, made out of 173 (including 38 extras) in two hours 25 minutes.

After an uncertain start Hammond found his form, and, with Washbrook, put on 76 in an unfinished stand. Washbrook shaped confidently.

Bradshaw's Chance

By J. P. ROONEY

HOW will Harry Bradshaw, Fred Daly and the other Irish professionals who are going to St. Andrews for the Daily Mail's Victory Tournament next month fare; will they finish the 72 holes anywhere near the top of the prize list?

The Southern contingent, for a certainty, will include Harry Bradshaw (Kilcroney), Pat O'Connor (Woodbrook), Kevin O'Connor (Elm Park), Adam Whiston (Dun Laoghaire), Eddie Hackett (Portmarnock), Norrie Wilson (Bray), Dick Ferguson (Lucan), Jack O'Neill (Howth) and Willie Holley (Castle).

My own view is that the only four players from this country likely to put up a really serious challenge are Bradshaw, Daly, Fairweather and Whiston.

UNBEATABLE OFF SCRATCH

A review of the scores returned in the Irish competitions during the last six years provides support for this view. Daly and Fairweather admittedly are Northern Ireland's best golfers, and but for his handicap of plus 4 our champion would have won every competition staged in the South. As it was, he won most of them with an average per round that proved him to be almost invincible if playing from scratch.

Remember what the late Paddy Mahon did in the English tournaments, before Bradshaw came on the scene, against the best of the British professionals.

For the last four years Bradshaw has been playing golf of a higher standard than Mahon ever was capable of playing, with a wider range of strokes with the irons, and yet Bradshaw's chipping and putting is perhaps the strongest feature of his eminently consistent game.

It was a cherished tradition at St. Andrews that any one who was not an expert at the run-up and the pitch-and-run stood no chance in big golf there. J. H. Taylor, with his lofted pitches, won the Open championship at St. Andrews, and James Bruen, with the same type of stroke, shattered that age-long tradition completely.

HAS ALL THE STROKES

I know St. Andrews, with its maze of expertly constructed and hidden hazards, but the finished golfer who refrains from slogging and from taking unnecessary risks, and has the essential temperament to take things as they come, never is at sea, so to speak, at St. Andrews.

Bradshaw seldom strays off the straight path; he has at command all the strokes needed on this world-famous links—the low run-up, the pitch-and-run, the lofted iron and mashie, and with the putter he is the personification of steadiness.

With four rounds of 71 (and with luck he can reel them off) he should go very near to winning the first or second prize.

BALBRIGGAN NEW COURSE.

The new golf course at Balbriggan was opened on Sunday, when A. Whiston and W. Kinsella beat H. Bradshaw and S. McGealy, 1 up, in an exhibition match. Mixed foursomes winners were K. O'Dwyer and Mrs. Gaynor.

WHY WE LAG BEHIND

The standard of swimming in Ireland, in the opinion of Mr. W. H. Downing, the well-known English swimming coach and instructor, is as much inferior to the general standard in England as the English standard is to that of America. The position is likely to remain so until proper facilities are available for all-the-year-round practice in indoor baths.

Mr. Downing commenced his tour of the clubs by giving a lecture and demonstration at Tara Street Baths last night.

Forty swimmers took part in the demonstration, and certain faults were pointed out in the Irish women's 440 yards free style champion's (Miss K. McNally) crawl stroke. P. Feddis, one of the most promising swimmers in the province, was another to have his style criticised.

To-day Mr. Downing will visit Blackrock (morning) and Dun Laoghaire (evening) Baths for swimming instruction to the Young Leinster, Otters and Dalkey Clubs.

CORK'S CHOSEN.

Cork's team to play Galway in the All-Ireland football semi-final at Croke Park on Sunday is:—M. O'Driscoll, D. Magnier, P. Murphy, C. Crone, P. Cronin, T. Crowley, D. O'Connor, F. O'Donovan, E. Young, M. Tubridy, H. O'Neill, E. Casey, J. Lynch, J. Cronin, D. Beckett. Subs.—P. Healy, M. Finn, D. Cullinane, S. Kavanagh, B. Murphy, P. O'Grady, S. Lenihan.

LONESOME TRAIL'S PRICE

Lonesome Trail, who won the Silverpark Plate for maiden two-year-olds at Leopardstown on Monday, was sold as a yearling to Messrs. Kerr and Co. for 280 gns.

Tooth Chokes Boy

WHILE playing "cowboys and Indians" near his home in Mountjoy street, Dublin, 13-year-old Christopher Lewis fell from a seven-foot wall, fracturing an arm and breaking a tooth, which choked him. A verdict of accidental death was returned at the inquest.

That death was due to shock and heart-failure, following burns received when she threw herself into the fire at St. Kevin's Hospital, Dublin, on June 2nd, when of unsound mind, was the verdict returned by the Deputy City Coroner, Dr. J. P. Shanley, at an inquest in Steevens's Hospital, Dublin, yesterday, on Mrs. Ellen Murphy (63), 15 Old Camden street, Dublin, who died on July 30th at Grangegorman Mental Hospital. Dr. Shanley added that no blame was attached to the staff of St. Kevin's Hospital.

The inquest on Kathleen Langan (29), Bluebell Cottage, Inchicore, who died from injuries she received following a collision between her bicycle and a motor vehicle on August 3rd, was opened yesterday at Steevens's Hospital and adjourned after evidence of identification and medical evidence was heard.

Fight About a Cab Fare

Charges of assaulting a cab-driver and failing to pay a fare of 16/- made against John E. Price, Lisroyan, Streete, Co. Westmeath, in the Dublin District Court, yesterday, were dismissed by District Justice Mangan.

According to the evidence of the cab-driver, James Daly, James's Street Flats, he was approached in O'Connell street on Monday night by two American soldiers, the accused man and another man and three girls, and asked to drive the party to a hotel in Upper Dominick street. He agreed to take them after pointing out that seven was "an overload." He told one of the soldiers in Dominick street that the fare was 16/-, and the soldier was about to pay him when Price said that he would not get 16/-.

Subsequently Daly said he took up a stick, which Price pulled from him and struck him with it.

In reply to Mr. Mangan he said the legal fare from O'Connell street to Upper Dominick street was 5/9 or 6/-, but he thought he was entitled to more owing to the overload.

Price said that he offered to pay 12/-, but Daly would not take it and took up a threatening attitude. They both fell and Daly struck him with his fist.

The fare of 16/-, the District Justice said, was in excess of the legal fare due for the journey. In connection with the other summons, he said he was satisfied that it was the cabman who first showed signs of violence and that the defendant had not assaulted him other than in self-defence.

German Internee Married In Dublin

A German internee, Karl Schaskoff, was married to a Dublin woman, Ethna Rea, of 14 Francis street, in Francis Street Church yesterday. The Rev. John Hooke, P.P., performed the ceremony.

The wedding originally had been fixed for three weeks hence, but when Schaskoff learnt that he was shortly to be sent back to Germany it was brought forward to yesterday.

Schaskoff has now returned to the Curragh. His wife stays in Dublin.

Theft of Cigarettes And Chocolate

In the Dublin District Court yesterday, District Justice Farrell sentenced Kevin Byrne, Ormond place, Dublin, to six months' imprisonment for the larceny from a carrier bicycle of cigarettes tobacco and chocolate, valued at £20, and Patrick A. Gurr, Emerald place, to four months for the same offence.

CONSOLS REACH HIGHEST PRICE SINCE 1936

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE majority of investors having apparently come to the conclusion that the fall in values following the General Election had been overdone, most stockbrokers received buying orders yesterday, and the buying appeared to be well spread over most sections. There were a few instances of weakness, such as a fresh fall in Transport "C" stock to 59, which movement was against the general trend for Home Railway stocks. In fact, Southern Railway Preferred Ord. rallied 2 points to 69, while Western Ord. rose ½ to 49½. Some of the Railway Pref. stocks, such as Great Western and Southern 5 p.c. Pref., continued a weak market, and were somewhat difficult to sell at 112½, compared with, roughly, 120 immediately before the election.

The rise in British Funds continued, with Consols 2½ p.c. an outstanding feature, with a rise to 85, which is the highest price recorded for the stock since 1936. Talk still circulates regarding a coming 3 p.c. loan for housing purposes. The best market, however, was for Home Industrials. Even Coal and Steel shares, as well as Electric Power and Gas stocks, staged a good recovery on a steady stream of repurchasing orders.

POWER SHARES RISE

Gains among Colliery shares extended to 1s. 7½d. in the case of Bolsover Colliery Ord. at 45s. 7½d., while, among Steel shares, Dorman Long Preferred rose 2s. 6d. to 47s. 6d., and Babcock and Wilcox Ord. 1s. 6d. to 53s. Many others showed gains of 6d. to 1s. each. In the Electric Power section several advances of 6d. to 1s. were recorded. Edmundsons Ord., for instance, rose 1s. to 26s. 6d. Calcutta Electric continued their rise with a fresh gain of 1s 6d. at 67s. 3d.

Improvements among the popular Industrials were quite substantial. Woolworth Ord. put on 3s. 9d. at 3 11/16, I.C.I. 1s at 36s. 3d., Courtaulds 2s. 6d. at 52s. 6d., Imps. 1s. 3d. at 7 11/16, and Fine Spinners 1s. at 23s. Decca Record advanced 2s. 6d. to 2¼, while Cossor, despite the dividend deduction, rose 1s. to 37s. Distillers came into strong demand and rose 2s. 3d. to 112s. 6d. In fact, the whole section showed to advantage.

Foreign Bonds remained rather idle, but Argentine Rails enjoyed good recovery. Oils remained a rather subdued market, and few features developed in the Mining sections, with business on a somewhat restricted scale.

Peace Talk on Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, Tuesday.—The trend of the Stock Exchange was irregular at the opening, and the market was rather quiet. Vanadium Corporation, a producer of uranium—used in the atomic bomb—was a feature, the issue rising more than three points from yesterday's closing level of 24. Dealings on the whole were slow during the morning, with Rails, Oils and Utilities recording fractional declines, while Steels and Metals continued to retreat. Some sources believe that the latest super-weapon could force a Nipponese capitulation, thereby creating reconversion difficulties overnight.

Favourable war developments revived talk of early peace in the Pacific, and a wave of selling forced prices down two or more points, with Rails, Utilities, Steels and Aircrafts especially hard hit. The leaders, however, came back from the extreme low levels to the dividing line, but only a few registered advances. The market at the close was barely steady.

Sales totalling 980,000 shares comprised 906 issues, of which only 194 advanced, 693 declined, and 119 remained unchanged.

Guinness Firmer on Good Buying

THERE was only a small accumulation of orders over the holiday week-end and consequently markets opened quietly on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday. Most attention was paid to Irish securities, where the tone was steady to harder for choice. British Industrials showed little life, but sentiment was much improved and prices generally moved in favour of holders.

Alliance Gas Ord. were freely offered and closed several pence lower at 22/4½. Quiet buying was in evidence in the Transport group. Gt. Northern Ord. firmed up to 26½, and the Deb advanced to 92. Coras Iompair Common was favoured and jumped a point to 72.

There was good buying of Guinness units and they soared 1/- to 140/6. Distillers Ord. also made headway and finished 1/6 higher at 112/-. Munster and Leinsters hardened to 142/3. Busy conditions prevailed among Home Government Funds and the tone was steady. Waterford 3½ p.c. gained 10/- at 99½. Pye (Ireland) Ord. moved up to 11/6 and Irish Shell Pref. added pence at 23/-, but Goulding Pref. dipped to 26/3.

Among British Industrials, Imperial Chemical Ord. strengthened 1/6 to 36/9 and Courtaulds Ord. jumped to 52/-. Lever Bros. Ord. changed hands at 45/3.

RISE IN CAR TAX REVENUE

Since April 1st, when the financial year began, motor taxation in Britain has produced £8,158,000, against less than half that sum (£3,571,000) in the corresponding period of last year.

Total ordinary revenue was substantially less at £63,800,876 (against £81,995,019) and expenditure rose to £119,085,273 (£118,113,228), leaving a deficit of £55,284,397 (£36,118,209). Revenue included: Income tax, £24,143,000 (£26,416,000); estate duties, £2,345,000 (£2,830,000); E.P.T., £5,600,000 (£9,534,000). Supply Services accounted for £101,050,090 (£114,668,500) of the national expenditure.

E.S.B.'S BIG TASK AT POULAPHOUCA

After operating since shortly before Christmas, sometimes for as long as 16 hours daily, one of the E.S.B.'s two main 15,000 K.V.A. turbines at Poulaphouca has been partially dismantled for routine inspection. As the subsidiary 4 megawatt turbine at Golden Falls is also temporarily out of commission, while steel sluice gates are being fitted to replace wooden ones used during the emergency, no electricity is at present being generated at Poulaphouca. Output will probably be resumed again early next month.

In the meantime, the work of assembling the second 15,000 K.V.A. turbine is being carried out by the Board's technicians. Although this turbine only arrived in Ireland roughly a month ago, its framework has been erected, while preliminary arrangements for the installation of its 16-ton propeller are almost complete. When it is in commission, possibly before the end of the year, the combined annual output of the station will total from 30,000,000 to 39,000,000 units.

Apart from this second turbine, the only other major work now to be completed at Poulaphouca is the installation of the half-moon-shaped control room. Here will be housed the push-buttons to operate (by compressed air) the battery of main 10,000-volt switches, already erected in a row of concrete cubicles. Here also will be the dials showing the rate of rotation of the turbines when in operation and the level of the huge "feeding" lake, which is 38 miles in circumference. Normally the turbines will rotate at 300 revolutions per minute. The many cylinders of CO_2 (necessary in case fire should break out as a result of internal fault in the turbines) have already been installed in the basement of the powerhouse.

It was during the period of heavy rainfall in May and June last that the turbine now under inspection was running continuously for 16-hour periods. When, however, all the turbines are in operation, the station will probably be in production only for three hourly periods daily—morning, afternoon and evening.

THE MIGHTY ATOM

The advent of the atomic bomb has brought us, at one stroke, into the world of Astounding Stories. No single disclosure of the war—not even that of the rocket bomb — has had so profoundly disturbing an influence on the mind of the ordinary man. He sees that he has entered an era in which the means of destruction have become so powerful that any further war must be almost an Armageddon. Since aircraft have encircled the world in a few days, Jules Verne has gone out of date. The latest development in war brings to terrible reality the atomic bomb imagined by Mr. Harold Nicolson, nearly fifteen years ago, in his political fantasy "Public Faces" — a weapon so devastating that it altered the whole course of world politics. Can the new bomb have an equally great effect on the course of world affairs? If its destructive power is, indeed, as great as is suggested by the reports, there seems to be no doubt that the possession of the atomic bomb could give any State which cared to employ it ruthlessly complete dominance over all its neighbours. The new bomb, it is said, has more than 2,000 times the blast force of the British ten-ton bomb, hitherto the largest used in warfare. No details yet are available of the results of the dropping of the atomic bomb on the seaport town of Hiroshima, since the great cloud of dust that was raised completely obscured the target from the reconnaissance aircraft; but it seems possible that this city of 200,000 inhabitants has been entirely wiped out. A couple of bombs, then, would eliminate the city of Dublin. It hardly is necessary to add that blast is undiscriminating, and that this form of attack establishes, once and for all, the rule that there is no strict delimitation of military targets in total war. All will suffer equally from this most terrible of man's inventions.

It is not surprising to read that the Japanese Cabinet held a special meeting on the morrow of the attack on Hiroshima. A new factor has been introduced into the war in the East, and must have its effects on the future policy of Japan. Already, there is little reason to doubt that relations between the various cliques that hold power in Japan are uneasy. The militarists have staked their all on the war, and they can hope for nothing from surrender. Their honour as warriors will urge them to fight to the end, even though they may have no hope but to sell their lives as dearly as possible. On the other hand, the industrialists must realise that an immediate cessation of hostilities, with the promise of re-admission to world markets at the earliest possible moment, would benefit them more than the prolongation of a war destructive alike to their material possessions and to their hopes for the future. The politicians of the Palace group no doubt would prefer to salve as much of their influence as they may by surrender than to go on to annihilation; and the same certainly holds good for the Emperor. The whole issue is whether the Army will continue to maintain its pre-eminence, or whether it will be over-ruled by the "liberal" elements; and the decision must depend, in part at least, on the spirit of the people. Will they decide that it is worth while to save their lives and their homes, as the industrialists undoubtedly will want to save their factories and machinery? Will the endurance of this amazing people break down at last, under the force of such an awe-inspiring attack? The minds of the people may be made up for them, of course, if the leaders of one party or the other decide to adopt the time-honoured means of political assassination; but a decision to continue the war in the face of the latest threat would amount to national hara-kiri.

A wider issue is raised, however, than the future of this single war. The atomic bomb represents the most convincing argument ever put forward in favour of an international authority to eliminate war as a means of settling disputes between nations. At present its power is available only to the United States; for, while Britain co-operated in the invention of the bomb, she has no means of manufacture available. Nevertheless, it has been proved long since that no major invention can be kept secret for long, and it is not beyond the scope of other nations to harness atomic energy in a similar way. One controlling factor exists, for the moment: the essential material for the bomb is uranium, and the known supplies of that element appear to be small. Nevertheless, one cannot overlook the fact that atomic energy has been employed successfully for the first time; and it is hard to set a limit to the process of development. The very least that is certain is that another war on the scale of that through which the world has passed, or is passing, would result in devastation on an unprecedented scale. For the moment, it seems that the power of the human race to destroy has outstripped its power to build. There appear to be two possible prospects. On the one hand, if all States were equally armed with these fearful weapons, the result might be that—as with poison gas in the Second World War — every nation would refrain from using them for fear of reprisals. Such a peace would be an uneasy affair, indeed, and the temptation would remain for a warlike State to strike, without warning, a single tremendous blow that would cripple any possible opposition. The alternative is that the United Nations organisation should succeed in preventing war entirely for the future. If that were done, we might look forward to seeing atomic energy used to serve man, not to destroy him—a new and mighty agent in the work of peace.

The Haverty Trust

Few people have done more for art in Ireland, in a practical way, than Thomas Haverty. Shortly before his death in 1916, Haverty, who had himself exhibited at the Royal Academy, devoted his savings to the formation of a trust fund, for the purchase of pictures by Irish artists for the nation. The income from the fund now amounts to more than £500 a year, and with this money the Director of the National Gallery, the President of the Royal Hibernian Academy, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin, who administer the fund, buy outstanding pictures from the year's exhibitions. It was Haverty's wish that the works selected should be what are known as "subject" pictures—those which represent, for example, a historical scene, but he was prepared to admit some landscapes of high merit. A change in artistic taste has made it desirable for the administrators to interpret these instructions somewhat liberally—to buy rather more landscapes, for instance, than might have been intended—and they have brought together in the fifteen years in which the fund has been available a very worthy collection of works by Irish artists. Partition raised a curious problem. At the time when the original terms of reference were drawn up there was no border, but after the establishment of two separate States in Ireland it became necessary to divide the benefits of the fund fairly between the two. With the concurrence of the courts, it was arranged that one-quarter, in terms of value, of the pictures bought should go to Northern Ireland, and that the division should be made every five years, after an exhibition of the works acquired in that time. Such an exhibition opens in Dublin next week. It ought to be worth the attention of all art-lovers; for it will show what work is being done by the Haverty Trust to increase the national collection, and will bring again to the notice of his countrymen the great gift that was bestowed on them by an Irish painter.

DUBLIN'S ADVANCE IN DOMAIN OF ART

A painting which "recognises the arrival in our midst of the atomic bomb and the desperate possibilities of this new weapon of warfare" is being exhibited in Dublin at present.

The work, an oil-painting by Mr. Sean Keating, R.H.A., and entitled, "Homo Sapiens," was described in this way by Mr. L. S. Gogan, Keeper of the Art and Industrial Section of the National Museum, when he opened a Dublin Art Circle Exhibition of Irish paintings and objets d'art at the Shelbourne Hotel yesterday. The promoters of the exhibition are Evelyn Ruffer and Geraldine Beresford.

Mr. Gogan said that Dublin had during the war period stepped up to Continental status not only in the domain of art, but also in the domain of art criticism. The exhibition was interesting inasmuch as it was a kind of cross-section of different types of art flourishing on the Continent and which had been transplanted here.

A.P. writes:—

The exhibits include a Dutch interior by Gerard Dou, showing an old couple dining together in the harmony which can only come from long association and understanding. The execution is masterly, and the whole picture is rich and colourful in the low-toned scale used by the painters of that time. One wonders what has been gained by the high key in vogue nowadays.

Among the moderns there is a finely-balanced Paul Henry, demonstrating all the remarkable colour, form and design of this painter's work. There are also several water-colours by Robert Burke, of Waterford, "Dublin from the Hills" being a particularly good picture, showing the network of fields approaching the city and the distant docks, steeples and towers. His drawings of race meetings are gay and have character.

"Country Holiday" is a genre picture by Muriel Brant, and Mabel Young has one of her best pictures, "Western Harvest," which depicts yellow hay-stacks against a fresh, blue sea. Sean Keating shows his "Homo Sapiens," which is well painted, but more suitable for a magazine cover. Grace Henry has three lovely pictures —"Doves," a picture of Venice, and another still-life. They are in her finest vein. Grau, a new painter, has some portraits, and Leo Whelan shows the interior of a forge. Evelyn Ruffer shows "Sonata," which conveys in some subtle way the soul of music.

Among the objets d'art are a Dresden service, of 125 pieces, of the royal dragon design; two Baxter prints, a Bokhara rug, and a beautiful Indian miniature of an Indian lady. There are also examples of flat point lace, Limerick lace and Carrickmacross crochet lace.

OBITUARY

MR. JOHN SLATER

The death is announced of Mr. John Slater, a former Mayor of Kilkenny. He was a staunch supporter of the old Irish Parliamentary Party, and the last member of that Party to be Mayor of Kilkenny, which distinction he held for two years—1917 and 1918. He is survived by his wife and one daughter.

DUBLIN STRIKES CONTINUE

The Dublin strikes continue unchanged, and both the employers and the unions are marking time. Laundry workers will parade through the principal streets of the city this afternoon.

The Conciliation Board met in Dublin yesterday to consider the demand of some thousands of workers in the job printing trade in Dublin for a fortnight's holidays with pay. The conference was adjourned for a fortnight pending consideration of an offer, which will be considered by the groups involved.

LIFE SAVING AWARDS

At the meeting of Dun Laoghaire Borough Corporation last night, Mr. H. P. Dockrell (chairman) presented the award of the honorary testimonial of the Royal Humane Society to Eric Metchett (16), Guandy, Dalkey, for the rescue of David W. Jones (7), Dalkey, from drowning at Coliemore Harbour, Dalkey.

A special letter of appreciation from the Society was also presented to Mr. Frederick Austin, foreman, L.M.S., Carlisle Pier, Dun Laoghaire, for having saved the life of James Brown, a workman at the pier, who fell between the pier and the mail boat on the night of December 29th last.

DUBLIN MAN FINED £250

Sydney James Poole, Woodstock road, Belfast, and James Somers, Ranelagh, Dublin, were each, at Belfast yesterday, fined £250 and sentenced to two months' imprisonment for having dealt in a prohibited article—an International lorry, valued at £500.

In the event of an appeal, bail was fixed for Poole at £1,000. Somers was refused bail.

It was stated that Poole, a salesman, employed by a Belfast motor firm, agreed to send the lorry to a man named Byrne, a gravel merchant in Dublin. In a restaurant they met Somers who, after a private conversation with Byrne, agreed to take the lorry across the border for £100. Belfast police found a lorry in Byrne's garage in Dublin.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Battle Rehearsal

The first full-scale dress-rehearsal of "The Battle of Benburb"—set piece of the coming Military Tattoo—was launched yesterday afternoon in the grounds of the former International Hotel, Greystones, now an Army and L.D.F. camp.

The men taking part in the battle spent the morning drawing their various uniforms—period 1646. As they came straggling back from the clothing store carrying tin armour, wide-brimmed brown canvas hats, check kilts of sacking, yellow jerkins, the dun-coloured bivouacs and the trampled brown grass suddenly became alive with colour. Some of the men bravely wore parts of their new uniforms—a visored helmet or a blue tam-o'-shanter—with their ordinary clothes. They were greeted by enthusiastic cheering.

A section of the camp has been marked off to correspond exactly with the jumping enclosure at Ballsbridge, where the final version of the battle will be staged. The double banks are represented by sacking stretched over a wooden framework. There are also two hurdles, made of gorse.

On top of one of the banks is the control tower, from which the camp commandant, Major Olaf MacNeill, produces the show.

Where Is She?

For a considerable time before, and during, the battle I thought we were waiting for a lady called Olive. The whole thing seemed to hinge on Olive. Everybody was looking for Olive—"Where's Olive?" "Did you see Olive?" "What does Olive think of it?" Then it became plain that the army pronounces Olaf with the accent on the first syllable.

By the time that the army has finished with the public the public is going to know more about the Battle of Benburb than it did, and so I shall leave the details of Benburb alone. But this is what happened at the rehearsal.

The show begins with a group of Irish soldiery, rude enough in brown and yellow uniforms and wide-brimmed hats, lounging around a camp fire. Two Irish cavalrymen come galloping in with the news that Owen Roe O'Neill is on the way to reorganise the Irish forces. Considerable excitement arises among the Irish soldiery—yesterday afternoon rather more because of the proximity of the horses than because of the good news.

In this battle—at least at its present stage of development—the infantrymen trust the cavalry one inch. The horses, fine, heavy beasts from Transport, seem exceedingly fresh. Once they begin to gallop they do so with such vigour that the infantrymen give them as wide a berth as possible.

Taking Sides

Owen Roe appears, played by Commandant James Stack, of the Irish Jumping Team. Yesterday, Commandant Stack wore Army uniform. His Owen Roe wardrobe is still in the course of preparation.

Jubilation springs up among the Irish soldiery—again tempered by the fact that Commandant Stack was riding another of those Transport horses. Owen Roe introduces the system of training into the Irish Army that he learnt while serving in Spain.

Then come the English, in red and white and blue and ammunition-box armour, led by Major Justin MacCarthy as General Munro. Lined up against them is Owen Roe's new army.

On the Irish side are men with sixteen-foot pikes; musketeers in breastplates; men in kilts with outsize swords; guerrillas, known in those days as creaghts, in yellow and brown and army blankets; and the Irish cavalry in yellow and white.

They oppose the blue and scarlet English army. In [illegible] the English are cannon. The cannon barrels are melted down German planes, wrecked on these shores in a later war. The cannon are charged with gunpowder wrapped in newspaper and tied with string, and armed with felt wads in the place of cannon balls.

The two armies make a superb splash of colour.

Watchful Dead

Then comes the clash. The English open their cannonade. Excellent smoke and flames burst from the mouths of the ex-Heinkel gun barrels. The English charge, and are repelled by a cavalry attack from the Irish cavalry. The ground is strewn with the circumspect dead, who occasionally sit up to have a look round. It may be true that a galloping horse never steps on a prone man; but the prone man always likes to know when a galloping horse is coming.

Further attacks are launched, and the curious thing is the figure on the unoccupied flank standing quietly watching the proceedings about twenty yards from the men in mortal combat with the enemy. This is in the true tradition. In battles in 1646 you waited until you were spoken to before going out with your pike. This stage of battle would probably baffle the inventor of the atomic bomb. He'd laugh, if he is capable of it; but that is how it happened.

Now comes the climax of the battle. Owen Roe addresses his troops, urging them to fight. He turns to face the enemy, and gives the order to charge.

One Down

The motley Irish troops fling themselves upon the solid blue and scarlet English lines. The English cannon explode in their faces, but the Irishmen drive on. The guns are overrun, and, with splendid realism, fall to pieces. The air is full of the clashing of pikes and the crash of armour.

Then comes the final decisive charge by the Irish cavalry—a headlong charge down the English left flank.

This, frankly, found me plucking the sacking of the control tower to pieces. These huge Transport horses, acting very like Tyrone Power, with flaring nostrils, thunder down upon the scattering English at a pace that must have got them in any good-class hurdle.

The pace, in fact, proved too much for one Irish cavalryman. His saddle slipped. He came off with a crashing of armour, and lay very still on the ground. A chaplain ran across the field. The loud-speaker shouted urgently for a doctor. But the man got up. He was only half conscious, but was not badly hurt.

The battle raged away from him. Now the kilts and the brown and yellow uniforms were everywhere. The day had been won.

One thing I should mention. The 2nd Brigade play the part of the English, and the 6th Brigade that of the Irish. Already the 2nd are getting a little tired of continuously losing the battle. There are rumours that they will attempt to reverse the evidence of history on the last night of the Tattoo.

Major Olaf MacNeill is dealing with this. He is encouraging the two sides to fraternise as much as possible in their spare time.

QUIDNUNC.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
TUESDAY NIGHT.

The most vital advance in the chain of pre-war discoveries which has led to the perfection of the atomic bomb was the original splitting of the atom 13 years ago by the late Lord Rutherford—Professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge—and his collaborators, Dr. J. D. Cockcroft and Dr. Ernest Thomas Sinton Walton, M.A., M.Sc., Ph.D., the Irish physicist.

Cockcroft and Walton disintegrated lithium atoms with a discharging tube of 100,000 volts tension, and for their discovery, that nuclei could be disintegrated by artificially-produced bombarding particles, they were jointly awarded the Hughes Medal by the President and Council of the Royal Society.

Professor Cockcroft (48), mentioned in Mr. Churchill's account as one of the directors of the experiments costing £500,000,000, which have resulted in a discovery which transcends all known experience, is Jacksonian Professor of Natural Philosophy at Cambridge.

Dr. Walton (42) was educated at the Methodist College, Belfast; at T.C.D., and at Cambridge. He was awarded a special Research Scholarship in 1927 and, later, the Clark Maxwell Scholarship and the senior award of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research.

He lives at 26 St. Kevin's Park, Dublin; is married, and has two sons and one daughter.

Cavendish Laboratory

The original splitting of the atom took place at the Cavendish Research Laboratory at Cambridge. Henry Cavendish (1731-1810), younger son of Lord Charles Cavendish, was its founder. He devoted his whole life and fortune to scientific research, and was credited with the discovery of the composition of water and the existence and nature of hydrogen gas. He made many important discoveries in electricity, which anticipated the results of Coulomb and Ohm, and Faraday discovered electro-magnetic induction and started [illegible] Production of Currents [illegible]tion.

Atoms of Uranium

It was announced just before the war that scientists using uranium atoms could make a 200,000,000-volt blast when bombarded with slow neutrons. Since then fantastic advances have been made, and it will be some time before even the most clear-sighted can grasp the full effect which the atomic bomb may have on the direction of human affairs.

BELFAST M.O.H.

Belfast Public Health Committee yesterday recommended the Corporation to appoint Dr. S. Barron Medical Officer of Health, in succession to Dr. C. S. Thomson.

KING PETER AND TITO AT GRIPS

TWENTY-ONE years old King Peter II of Yugo-Slavia caused a sensation in London last night, within a few hours of Marshal Tito's call for a Republic, by issuing a proclamation to his people withdrawing his authority from the three Regents appointed after the crisis in March this year.

"In my country," states the King, "there exists on a full scale the dictatorship of the Tito régime."

He recalls that he had led his people in the war before "the belated appearance of Marshal Tito," whom he accuses of "dictating to the people," and asserts that no clause of the agreement with Tito had been fulfilled.

He considers that the Regents had overlooked their oaths and obligations as his representatives, and he, therefore, withdraws his authority from them.

"Henceforth the duty of defending the constitutional rights of my people reverts to me."

The King further said in his proclamation that Marshal Tito's speech to the Yugo-Slav National Council was the final repudiation of the agreement concluded between himself and Dr. Subasic, the King's Prime Minister, a process which began almost immediately after it was signed.

TITO'S CALL

It was reported yesterday that Marshal Tito had called for a Republican form of Government, and the complete destruction of "reactionary bands" still hiding in the forests. The time had come to discuss the Monarchy, he said. King Peter's name had been associated with acts by General Mihailovitch and General Neditch, who, he said, had "collaborated with the Germans against the Liberation movement."

"The Yugo-Slav National Liberation Council," Marshal Tito said, "decided for these reasons not to allow the King to return to the country in 1943. The monarchy is completely incompatible with the new form of Government which is being developed in Yugo-Slavia."

Marshal Tito added that the monarchy would inevitably try to overthrow the new democratic institutions, and said: "Therefore the mass of the Yugo-Slav people is openly republican."

Vocational Organisation To Help State

The Right Rev. Dr. Harvey, Bishop of Waterford, a member of the Vocational Commission, who presided at yesterday's meeting of Muintir na Tire Rural Week at De La Salle College, Waterford, said that the process of vocational organisation was already afoot and was proceeding apace, but it was very haphazard and incomplete. There was, he said, only one body comparable to the Vocational Assembly recommended by the Commission's report, and that was the economic Council of France, which had been a triumphant success and had the rôle assigned to it of harmonising all the various economic conditions of the country and also acting as expert advisers to the Government on matters of economic interest. He thought that the advice of such a body was more than ever needed to-day, when economic questions bulked so largely in the work of the Government and when economic planning was so much in evidence.

"But," declared Dr. Harvey, "if planning has to be done, governments must have expert advice, and how much better than the advice of individual experts will be the voice of a body like the Vocational Assembly." There was, said Dr. Harvey, such a great danger in intensive national planning that if it were not carefully adjusted to the planning of other countries, it would incline to provoke international stress and strain.

"It needed to be shouted from the housetops that the National Vocational Assembly was not and never was intended to be a rival Dail," said the Rev. Dr. P. Ahearne, St. John's College, in his paper on "The National Vocational Assembly."
